

DIRECT VOICE

HDRs ↔ University Executive

Call out to HDR students
Participate in this student research project and
Have your voice heard by the University Executive decision makers.

Would you like to have your voice heard by University management and express your opinion directly into one of the decision-making forums of the University Executive? Take part in this Masters by Research study and express your opinion about proposed changes to HDR funding programs, PRSS grants, APR processes, and other issues that directly impact your HDR experience. The aggregated, de-identified opinions of study participants will be delivered directly to a decision making area in the University Executive by the researcher conducting this study. Participating HDR students will have their voice and their opinions considered by University management before decisions are made that directly impact the HDR academic experience.

To learn more about this study and for Participant Info. Statement

DirectVoice.info

Register between 1st and 15th June, 2017

DirectVoice.Sydney

Or scan this QR code with your smartphone
(download a QR reader for free from Google Play store or Apple App store).

Registration for this study will close on 15th June 2017.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

Participation in this research study is voluntary and anonymous. It is open only to current HDR students at the University of Sydney. Research is being conducted by Rebecca Johnson, an HDR student in the department of Media and Communications.